Governance and Legislation

Toronto Community Housing will meet or exceed the following legislative requirements:

Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act, 2005 (AODA)

The AODA came into effect in 2005. It permits the Ontario government to establish Accessibility Standards in order to remove or prevent barriers for Ontarians with disabilities¹ by 2025. For details on Toronto Community Housing's compliance with the ¹ The AODA uses the same definition of disability as the Ontario Human Rights Code, which includes disabilities of differing severity, both visible and non-visible, as well as permanent and transient disabilities. See Guide to the Accessibility Standards for Customer Service, Ontario Regulation 429/07, Accessibility Directorate of Ontario, January 2008.

AODA and associated legislation refer to the relevant policies as listed in the Policy Details.

Accessibility Standards for Customer Service (ASCS)

The ASCS is an accessibility standard created under the AODA. Toronto Community Housing was required to comply with this regulation by January 2012. The Accessible Customer Service Policy was enacted by Toronto Community Housing in 2011 to guide staff in complying with this regulation. Toronto Community Housing has implemented the necessary policies, training, and practices to comply with these Standards.

Employment Standards Act, 2000 (ESA)

The ESA sets out the minimum standards for working in Ontario and defines the rights and responsibilities of employees and employers. Toronto Community Housing is committed to complying with the standards outlined in the ESA as they relate to accessibility and accommodation on the basis of disability.

Ontario Human Rights Code (OHRC)

The OHRC was enacted in 1990 and ensures the rights of all people to be treated equally and without discrimination based on race, colour, gender identity, sex, sexual orientation, disability, creed and age. Toronto Community Housing is committed to upholding the OHRC in its entirety.

Integrated Accessibility Standards (IASR)

The IASR was enacted under the AODA in 2011, with phased implementation requirements commencing January 1, 2012 through to January 1, 2021.

The IASR addresses three specific areas of relevance to Toronto Community Housing: accessible employment practices; accessible information and communication supports; and design of the built environment. Provisions that guide staff in complying with the IASR can be found in a number of policies, programs and standards and are noted in the Policy Details below.

Toronto Community Housing tracks the implementation of the IASR in its multi-year Accessibility Plan. The plan is posted on Toronto Community Housing's website and is made available in accessible formats upon request. The plan is updated on an ongoing basis and is fully reviewed every five years.

Ontario Building Code (OBC)

The OBC is a set of mandated building design and construction standards aimed at minimizing the risk to the health and safety of the occupants of a building and to provide for the barrier-free access to buildings. Toronto Community Housing follows the standards set out in the OBC in order to make sure that the design and construction of all new buildings, and changes and additions to existing buildings serve to increase accessibility for residents and meet legislative requirements by 2025.
